leving liberty—if they had been born in the South, born of parents that held shaves, themselves familiar with it from their cradle, and had come up to the years of twenty one, how many of them would have been shave holders to day? If he had been one of that class, he did not think it improbable that he should have been a very raisorous shaveholder; the probability was that he should—that was his own impression. When he looked at the conduct of men throughout the South and southwest he asked himself the question, "Who made him to differ?" too! place him here and put them there. The circumstances round about him educated him to love personal liberty for almost and for their people; the circumstances round them were directly opposite. He held that they were wrong in the court of judgment, of history, and of morals, but were they of the North in a situation to judge with assertly such persons, and to be arrogant toward them?

POLITICS IN THE PULPIT.

Sessioner on the Political Revolution.

The Sense Sense of the Political Revolutions of the Political Revol the connocide his messer to be tender to these wind and one as they naw. There were more to the wind and the content of the co

(Colored) Church.

Prince and Marion streets, there were two sermous preached yesterday, one in the alternoon and one in the evening. On the former occasion, the colored preacher (Rev. H. H. Garnet) took his text from the Acts of the Apostics, casp. zr., verse 23: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost have made you overseers, to feed the church of Gol which he has purchesed with his own blood." He then, after a few remarks pertinent to the text, said that rulors happy and bisseed were they who were now called to seers of others. No matter how humble the man might be, no matter what his color, although the proud might curi the lip with diadain, if he were only in the right, be had that within him which the world could not lake away. There were not in the dock of the great Shepnerd which the shepherd deepied, he had the shep. He alluded to those who had worked he had the sheep. He alluded to those who had worked he sheep. He alluded to those who had worked he sheep of the color of the order of he were of her from of the egro elective Franchise, and said that those who had worked he shed to earlying of all bonor. After further remarks, he said the office honored the man, not the man the office; and when they considered the trials and verations of the office, they should be charitable. If they ruled contrary to his hearers' judgments, they were to impute it not to the wrong cause; if, however, they ruled in opposition to the will of God, fear not but that He would call them to account. He then recommended the congregation to pray for those in authority, and trust to Divise Providence for the result.

In the evening the services opened by the stoging of Cowper's hymn—"Sod However in a Hystericus Way, after which a prayer was offered, in which divine improaching was beseenched for the "smancipation of all from the curre of slavery," and resturing thanks for the privilege recent if conferred on them. The hymn commencing with the words, "However the tumpet, how," and ending wath. Rosturn ye restomed sinceric the Stath were for his lext:—"And when they had heard these things they were full of wrath, and cried out, Great is Diann of the Ephenians."

He then commenced with the words, "The earth is full of zorraw," and they resciced the Stath were for his lext.—"And when they had heard these things they were full of wrath, and cried out, Great is Diann of the Ephenians."

He then commenced with the words, with Cowper, "Oh, for a lodge in some wast withdrances," that he might got out of the way of its wickedness. The world was not ruled by usage; and before any one could reach the a current of the poor wretches, and the heart breakform of others, and where was its goodness or loveliness. There was in this city a lawyer of high standing—if it were not Enoday sight he would meetion his same, but it would see the day and place unloy to do so—let him see alaxery as it is, and then ask him if it is lovely. He would say "Mo, except the gain derived thereby." He is one of the Demetriness of New Yors, who cry "Great is sharery, the Dians of America." Ank those hypocrites who aboliabed the curse in this State, why it is continued They will answer that they were making their shrines from if in the shape of cotton, clota, &c., and they therefore cry, "Great is dry goods, the Dians of New York:" and they make their workmen join in the cry. But on Tuesday last, with all their cry "the old throne was shaken, and it wil be repeated again and again." With regard to the colored emancipation is add, turning to the different parts of the church, "I know some or you don't like the subject, but you must have it. This is the only chance I shall have of getting you togather." He then began with the editors, who, in every column from day to day, opposed it—who had a series of small articles addressed to avery class of society, urging them to vote against it, threatening them with ruin to their trade, and dissortion of the Teino if they did not. These were all Demetriness. But they were not one seath so much to blame for the failure of the cause as those false friends, the republicans. He did not allude to the conservative republicans, but the radical abolition the same did nothing. These were Demetrines whose cry was for gain. Not only to them must be ascribed the failure of the cause which can never again rise, but to those "black men who did not do their duty to them. Selves. I must and will tell you of it. You have described your own blood. Come out from your divisions and do your duty, not merely by prayers, but as the childres of one universal parent." After other remarks he proceeded to the following effect ties of the mable bearers, as were persons present.

Stroug Draft — in Westport, Connecticut, on Friday

Sunous Duarn.—In Westport, Connecticut, on Friday last, died a man who, prior to his death, gave his name to E Williams as J. Cooper. He was apparently about thirty-five to forty years of ago, had black hair, dark complexion, and wore a mutache (had no other whiskers) high cheek bones and large open, about five feet nice tuches high. He left at Mr. E Williams' shoe store, in Westport, the evening before, a bundle containing one chirt, one undershirt and three collars and one black cloth cap also a box containing jewellers' tools of various kinds. An inquest was held, and the jury reindered the verdict that the said Cooper came to his death from causes to them unknown.
